

Hey, Saksham --

At Major League Hacking (MLH), we believe that hackers like you are changing the world. It feels like almost every day we hear about another student who wanted to be a doctor or accountant before they attended one of our events and decided to become a hacker instead. In fact, if it weren't for hackathons, we would have never founded Major League Hacking - I would have been practicing law and my co-founder, Jon, would have been teaching history. Go figure.

I wanted to personally thank you for participating in Data Day Grind. There are a lot of other ways you could be spending your time right now, but knowing that you decided to spend it hacking with us and our community means so much. We sincerely hope you had fun participating, made a friend or two, and learned something new along the way. To commemorate the experience, we've enclosed some stickers that you can showcase on your laptop or notebook.

Once again, thank you so much for being a member of our community. MLH exists to empower hackers like you, our work would not be possible without your continued support. We hope to see you at another event sometime soon!

Happy Hacking,

Swift
